[1] In 2002, the International Federation of Library Associations and. Institutions (IFLA) established a new section called Mobile Libraries to provide access to information for all residents, particularly in remote and rural areas in different parts of the world.

[2] In Thailand, a new mobile library called The Floating Library was launched. There are currently two book boats in use, which offer a collection of over 2,000 books and educational facilities to riverside communities. Another way of implementing access to information in specific areas is the Elephant Libraries, where elephants are used to carry educational materials to 46 remote villages in Thailand. Materials carried by elephants include books, satellite dishes, generators, computers, video, and CD players, and writing boards. This project was awarded the UNESCO literacy prize in 2002.

[3] In Norway, a boat called Epos was built specifically to serve as a mobile library to reach rural areas. The book boat carries approximately 6000 books, and. visits 250 small communities twice a year. The book-boat sails from September to April and each trip consists of 64 days in three regions. Every day it stops at one to four places for about one to two hours. Even in a rich country like Norway, the school libraries are not well equipped to meet the children's needs in today's modern school. So for many of the students, the book boat is actually their main library.

[4] In Morocco, the ministry of culture and many non-governmental organizations have also adopted the idea of mobile libraries. Trucks or vans are used to carry different types of books to remote areas in Azilal, Errachidia, and other regions. Library on Wheels is the name given to this outstanding service. The mobile library stops either at schools or public squares and provides its services for a while before moving to another area. In Essmara, for example, teachers of English; started a project to facilitate the sharing of books among schools in the region in 2016. Each school has a list of books, and both students and teachers can request books they would like to read. Three volunteer teachers are in charge of keeping the books and then delivering them to a school whenever they are requested.

Model answers (any appropriate answer is accepted)

Task 1: Many people choose to learn English for different reasons. First, English is the language of the internet, science and technology, so it helps people find information and follow new developments. Second, it is useful for travelling because people can communicate with others almost everywhere in the world. Third, knowing English improves job opportunities since many companies ask for it. Finally, it allows people to enjoy films, songs and books in their original language.

Task 2: Dear Teacher, Thank you for your e-mail. I would like to join the English club. First of all, I love English and I want to improve my speaking, which I rarely practise in class. Moreover, in the club we can play games, watch films and debate in English, so learning will be fun. Another reason is that English is important for my future studies and for travelling. I hope there is a place for me in the club. Thank you very much. Best regards
