[1] The Brazilian journalist Sebastião Salgado and his wife Lélia decided to show that dedicated people can make a change. They were able to completely restore an entire forest that had been devastated by human action in their home town Minas Gerais in Brazil.

[2] Upon returning to his homeland from a duty as a journalist in Rwanda, Salgado felt very sad when he found the forest was lost and the animals had gone. It was not the tropical paradise that he remembered as a child. Then his wife came up with the fabulous idea of replanting the forest, something which they started later in 1994. Salgado said: "The land was as sick as I was; everything was destroyed. Only about 0.5% of the land was covered with trees. And when we began to do that, all the insects, birds and fish returned. This was the most important moment."

[3] To make their dream come true, Salgado and his wife recruited partners to plant trees. They also raised funds for their project. Also, in April 1998, they founded the Instituto Terra, a small organization that has since planted 4 million trees and has brought the forest back to life. Through the Instituto Terra, the couple managed to replant 2.7 million trees over two decades. They have completely transformed the environment back into its original condition. An entire ecosystem was built again thanks to this organisation. Now, the forest is thriving with animals and wildlife: 172 bird species, 33 species of animals, 293 species of plants and 15 species of reptiles have returned.

[4] The process has provided Salgado with one of the answers to climate change. He believes that "we have a solution. We need to replant the forest. You need forests with native trees if you want the serpents and the other insects to come back. And if you plant forests that don't belong to the area, the animals don't come there and the forest is silent."

[5] The reforestation effort of Sebastião and Lélia is incredible, but it will only last if people learn to respect the importance of the ecosystems. That's why the couple started the Center for Environmental Education and Recovery (CERA) in 2012. The aim is to educate farmers, teachers, businesses and government officials about environmental recovery and conservation techniques. The hope is that they will inspire those working near the forest to adopt more sustainable practices. Many organizations and individual volunteers are doing their best to protect the forest worldwide. The world needs more individual support and involvement to save the planet.

Model answers (any appropriate answer is accepted)

Task 1: Doing sports has a lot of advantages. First, it keeps our bodies healthy and strong. Second, it helps us reduce stress and feel more relaxed. In addition, team sports teach us to cooperate and respect others. Finally, doing sports regularly gives us more energy to study.

Task 2: Join Your School Clubs! Many students come to school only to attend classes and then go home. In my opinion, they are missing a lot of fun and learning opportunities. First, school clubs help you discover and develop your talents, such as acting, drawing or writing. Second, they allow you to make new friends and work in a team. Moreover, they improve your confidence and your communication skills, which will be useful in your future career. So, do not hesitate. Choose the club that interests you and join it today. You will not regret it!
