[1] Natividad Sánchez is a 7 year-old girl from El Salvador. She is the youngest of ten children, and their daily life is really hard. Every morning, her mother María goes to the local market to sell fish. Her older sister finishes the morning chores and her father José takes the youngest children to school.

[2] After school, Natividad and her brothers and sisters return home where their mother is either cooking or washing clothes. Their father is an electrician. Every day, he goes to the nearby villages to look for work. This routine posed a challenge for the family. Children had no safe and fun activity to do in the afternoon. "There's not much room at home, our street is quite dangerous and when the children wanted to play with other children, they had to go far away," says the mother. For the father, the main concern about letting them play in the street was insecurity: the town is known for its high rates of violence and crime.

[3] Everything changed for the family when the mayor of the city invited the children to attend free swimming lessons at the local sports centre. The invitation to join sports activities was extended to all children in town. This was part of UNICEF's violence prevention program. Today, more than 1,000 children participate in these activities three times a week.

[4] The swimming coach, Wilson Galán, says that Natividad and her siblings were outstanding. "Their results were surprising; in two months they mastered all the styles pretty well," he says. The children have now accumulated a collection of 47 medals they have won in different local and national competitions. For Natividad, who has won 8 of the medals, these triumphs have boosted her confidence. "I feel very excited when I hear my family encouraging me 'go, go, go' and I keep my strength till the end," Natividad says.

[5] Through the programme, Natividad got a scholarship that covers some of her school expenses. "For us, this is of great help so that she doesn't stop going to school," says her father. Both parents agree that playing sports has changed their children's lives. "It has been good for their health and their mind," says the mother. "They are active doing exercise; they have a purpose in life and are more disciplined in school." For her father, one of the greatest benefits of the programme is that it keeps the children safe from street violence.

Model answers (any appropriate answer is accepted)

Task 1: I still remember a lot of things about my primary school. It was a small school near my house, and I went there every day with my best friend. My teacher, Mrs. Amina, was very kind and patient. I loved the break time when we played football in the yard. I also remember the school trips and the end-of-year party. Those were the happiest days of my life.

Task 2: Dear Mr. Naji, I am writing to apply for the job of waiter at your restaurant, as advertised on your website. My name is Karim Alami. I am 18 years old and I live in Rabat. I am a Baccalaureate student and I speak Arabic, French and English. Last summer, I worked as a salesperson in my uncle's shop for two months. I am hard-working, polite and punctual, and I enjoy working in a team. In my free time, I like playing football and meeting people. I would be grateful if you could give me an interview. I look forward to hearing from you. Yours sincerely,
Karim Alami
